

Undergraduate Admissions & Relations with Schools
A Department of Student Affairs

Evaluation of Transfer Course Work

Undergraduate Admissions is not able to evaluate prospective students' course work as to its transferability to UCLA. Due to our large volume of applicants, we are only able to perform course-by-course evaluations for students who have been admitted to UCLA and who have notified us that they plan to enroll.

If the courses in question were taken at a California community college, check with the counseling office at that school to see if there is an articulation agreement (a list of community college courses and their credit equivalencies at UCLA) between the college and UCLA. If your course work is from an other institution, you will have to first apply to UCLA. If you are admitted and indicate that you plan to attend, a detailed evaluation of your course work will be performed then. You may gain some knowledge by comparing the catalog descriptions of courses you have taken against course descriptions in the UCLA General Catalog, though we cannot guarantee that this will prove accurate in all situations

Please refer to Transfer Admission for additional information on transfer admission requirements.

Terms of Use © 2008 UC Regents